ABOUT INFLIBNET

Information and Library Network (INFLIBNET) is a major mission of the UGC initiated in 1991 with an objective to automate and network libraries in Academic and R & D system to facilitate resource sharing at different levels and promote scholarly communication among academicians and researchers in the country. So far, 142 universities have been funded by the UGC under this programme for automation and networking. Creation of national union databases, development of an integrated library management software, human resource development, on-site training, providing bibliographic information services, extending technical help and guidance time-to-time to academic libraries in automation and networking are some of the major activities of the INFLIBNET Centre.

The UGC-Infonet Digital Library Consortium, one of the important activities of the Centre provides current as well as archival access to more than 4,500 core and peer-reviewed journals and three bibliographic databases from 23 publishers and aggregators in different disciplines. Since 2004, so far 120 Universities out of 171 that come under the purview of UGC have been provided differential access of subscribed e-resources covering almost all subject disciplines including arts, humanities, social sciences, physical sciences, chemical Sciences, life sciences, computer sciences, mathematics and statistics, etc.

ABOUT UNIVERSITY OF ALLAHABAD

The Allahabad University was founded on 23rd September 1887. It is the fourth oldest university of India. In 1904, The University along with all other existing universities of India was brought under the fold of Indian University Act. In 1921, an act was passed for the re-organization of the university as a unitary teaching and residential institution with control, however, over the quality and character of the teaching in constituent colleges.

In 1909, the present site of the campus was selected for the library along with the Senate House and the Law College. These buildings were designed by Sir Swinton Jacob. The University of Allahabad has 31 teaching and research departments. In addition to that three University Institutes; one constituent institute; one university medical college; and eleven constituent colleges spread all over the Allahabad city. The university earned national and international recognition as a premier institute of higher learning for its attainments and contributions to teaching, research and social commitment and the formidable academic reputation of its faculty members, several of whom command timeless respect for contributions to their respective disciplines and indeed the world of learning. The university offers tremendous opportunities to its students from all over the India and abroad. The University of Allahabad enjoyed the central status at the time of its incorporation in 1887. With the passage of time, it was governed under the U.P. State Universities Act, 1973 till July 13, 2005. After Parliament of India passed an act in May 2005, the Government of India by a Gazette notification on July 14, 2005 declared the University of Allahabad to be an Institution of national importance and consequently the university was granted central status.
